

RECORDS MANAGEMENT POLICY

4. Disposing of records

Before any record is disposed of, the records officer confirms that it is listed in the records register and that its disposal date has passed.

Disposal needs written custodian sign-off. The custodian named in the register approves each batch before it leaves the office.

Paper records are destroyed by cross-cut shredding on site. Electronic records are erased from every server and every backup copy.

When a batch has been destroyed, the records officer completes a destruction certificate and files it against the register entry.

5. Retention periods

Financial and tax records are kept for seven years from the end of the financial year they relate to.

Board minutes, company registers and title deeds are kept permanently and are never destroyed.
